The ceramic sink Reginox BELFAST II. 595 has undergone an innovation, which is why the number two is included in its name.

The sink has a deep basin, ideal for washing large objects, it has solid walls and is supplied complete with a chrome waste and a classically integrated overflow in a vintage style.

The Belfast modular sink is a perfect replica of the original Victorian style. The sink brings luxury and a touch of old times to your kitchen.

For modular ceramic sinks, installation directly on the lower installation cabinet is typical, and it is preferred to use non-porous countertops. If your countertop is made of wood or laminate, it is recommended to install the modular sink so that it protrudes above the level of the countertop.

The most common advantages of ceramic sinks include: high resistance to impact, resistance to scratching, high temperature resistance, hygienic safety, easy removal of limescale, colorfastness.
